

UPLIFT SPIRIT SHOWN IN SALON OF HUMORISTS

Keen Satire and Real Pathos, but Nothing to Provoke a Guffaw in Exhibition Given in Paris.

(Associated Press Correspondence.)
Paris, June 19.—The Humorists' Salon just opened, following the salon of Mobilized Artists, reflects the uplifting spirit of the time. There is not a picture in the collection to provoke a guffaw. There is plenty of fine satire and enough real pathos to draw tears from the sympathetic. Technically the work is of a much higher order than the preceding humorous art exhibitions. Much of it is taken from life and all of it shows higher inspiration.

Even more than the exhibition of soldier-artists is this a "War Salon." Every subject is taken from the European conflict; the exhibition is a sort of a pictorial summary of it, from the mobilization to the sinking of the Lusitania. The operations in the Boise le Pretre and around the afflicted town of Pont-a-Mousson are depicted by fourteen excellent aquarels that contain more pathos than humor. All the different types of soldiers, all the conspicuous personalities, all the different kinds of trench fortifications and shelters are sketched here with as much talent and fidelity as in the more serious mobilized soldiers' work. The humorous element is almost entirely in the line of cartoons. Poulbot Faivre and Guillaume in this department have treated in masterly fashion the views of German aircraft, the melancholy of pessimists and the subtleties of the men called "embusqués" who pull every wire to find employment at a safe distance from the firing line. The battle of the Marne is represented by a number of sketches, the most remarkable of which shows a Prussian infantryman prisoner in the hands of a tickled Algerian rifleman in the Esternay railroad station, September 10. The Alsatian cartoonists, Hans and Zislin, are the only exhibitors treating of events prior to the war, but their work also has its bearing on the conflict, showing the relations of the Germans with the native population in the annexed territory. Heroism, sacrifice, devotion, generosity, pessimism, enthusiasm, cowardice and cruelty, all portrayed or ridiculed by master hands in this collection.

Willeite is represented by some very forceful cartoons in which he treats the work of women and children in the war.

Following the Soldiers' Salon and the Humorists, people interested in the invaded departments are organizing a third salon, to include pictures from artists who are natives of the invaded departments.

DEFENDANT MIDSHIPMAN ON WITNESS STAND

(BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADER WIRE.)
Annapolis, Md., June 19.—The first appearance on the stand of a defendant midshipman marked today's session of the court of inquiry which is investigating the "cribbing" scandal at the naval academy. Midshipman A. C. Rogers was the witness. It developed that Rogers, who was a member of the third class, had translated for upper classmen, copies of advance information on the Spanish examination.

Rogers said he saw a copy of the "dope" when it was brought to him by Midshipman Price of the then second class and Midshipman (now Ensign) Conter, both of whom are defendants in the present proceedings. The young man testified that he made only three copies and after so doing he found, when he got in the examination room, that what he had translated was practically the examination itself.

Chicago 8; Baltimore 1.
Baltimore, June 19.—Today's game was played under protest by Baltimore, Chicago winning 8 to 1. The protest was the result of a play in the opening inning when Umpire Johnstone permitted a Chicago player to go to the bench direct from third, then score after a batter struck out with the bases filled and one out. The strike had gotten away from Catcher Owens, who recovered the ball and threw to third, the Chicago player running direct from the bench to the plate. He had gone to the bench from the field under the impression that he was forced.

Chicago . . . 213 101 100—8 14 1

CODHAM A MAN OF VARIED TALENTS

(Associated Press Correspondence.)
London, June 12.—Charles Delaval Codham, who has died at his home in Devonshire, was for thirty years British Commissioner of the Island of Cyprus. He was a man of many accomplishments, a linguist, an antiquary and the author of numerous books dealing chiefly with the history of Cyprus. He was commissioner from 1879 until 1905.

Almost everyone who went to Cyprus on business pleasure was hospitably entertained by Codham. He was Greek, Turk, Italian, Persian, French, German or English. Codham was able to converse fluently with him in his native language.

The story of his work in the development of the island during the thirty years when he was in charge there is practically the history of modern Cyprus.

SCANDAL DEVELOPS IN MILITARY INQUIRY

(Associated Press Correspondence.)
London, June 12.—A scandal of widespread interest has come out of the proceedings of a military court of inquiry to investigate the formation of the Empire Battalion by public subscription. Major A. T. Bathurst, one of the prime organizers is accused of misappropriating a check for $500. Moreover, according to a statement made in court by Major Lord Athlumney, the major has a criminal record and his right name is Pugh.

Lord Athlumney says court records show Pugh was sentenced to a year for fraud in 1895, eighteen months for attempted fraud in 1896, four years for larceny in 1899 and five years on the same charge in 1902. The man got his commission by posing as a former officer in the Turkish army. Many patriots contributed to and enlisted in the battalion, which had the sentimental objects of representing all parts of the British empire.
